Stephen/Val,
 Apparently Mr. Lewis is coming to the office next week to talk with Sam about people still fishing in the San Jacinto River close to the site. We need to get some pictures of the fence and a map/figure of the area that was fenced off. Also we need picture of the signs that were placed warning people about fishing. From the community meeting you attended a few weeks ago, do we know where people are still fishing or where they moved too that is close to the site? We need this information by tomorrow so we can brief Charles and Sam. Thanks CAS

Sam,
 The fence was placed to prevent people fishing at the waste pits. Also signs were placed at different locations to warn people not to fish. We just had a community awareness meeting to discuss the issue of people moving to other locations to fish. We are working with Harris County and other local agencies to ensure that the word gets about not fishing in these areas. We can meet with Mr. Lewis to talk with him about his concerns. CAS

Dear Mr Gray: Layla suggested I contact you. I am an attorney and head of a civic engagement nonprofit helping people organize related to the San Jacinto Waste Pits Superfund Site. I would like to discuss with the Regional 6 EPA office the fact that because of grossly inadequate fencing and warnings people are fishing within 10-500 yards of the dioxin-laden superfund site. Not only have our employees seen this repeatedly, but I saw it myself this last weekend. I also would like to see temporary fixes before full remediation at the site. Fred Lewis (b) (6)
